

IPLOCKS Wins Red Herring Global 100 2007 Award

Beats 1,800 Contestants Worldwide to Win Highly Coveted Award Bestowed for First Time

San Jose, CA; December 06, 2007 – Red Herring today announced that IPLOCKS™, whose award-winning software is Keeping Data Safe for companies around the world (www.iplocks.com), has won the highly coveted Red Herring Global 100 Award for 2007 (http://www.herringevents.com/global07/redherring100_winners.html).

IPLOCKS beat 1,800 global technology innovators to win this award bestowed for the first time by Red Herring magazine. The award is based on quantitative and qualitative criteria such as financial performance, innovation, management, global strategy, and ecosystem integration.

"Having received more than 1,800 submissions, it is clear that we are witnessing a new outburst of creativity," says Joel Dreyfuss, Editor-in-Chief of Red Herring. "With venture capital flowing again, it's exciting to see technology innovators and business investors collaborate to create disruptive technologies. The Red Herring Global 100 companies are impressive up-and-comers, and definitely the ones to watch." Red Herring 100 winners and finalists from North America, Europe and Asia of the last three years were eligible for the award.

“Red Herring is a recognized globally as a business leader for its ability to track exciting new innovations and is a great source of research for businesses, entrepreneurs and investors. We are very excited to be recognized by the Red Herring team for our successes in information security across the global marketplace,” said Adrian Lane, CTO, IPLocks.

In May, IPLocks was named a recipient of the Red Herring 100 Spring 2007, an award given to the top 100 private technology companies based in North America. Lane recently appeared as a guest on Red Herring TV to discuss IPLocks innovative security solutions that led to the receipt of its first Red Herring award. (<http://www.redherring.tv/iplocks.htm>)
